Family of services:

Letter from Executive Director and Board President

California's correctional justice system is going through the most sweeping reform in its history. For some of the families we serve, this means their loved one will be released sooner than hoped. For others, it means their loved one has been moved to a different facility that may be further away from home or even in another state. But despite these changes, one thing remains the same . . . children suffer for crimes they did not commit at the hands of a system that does not take them into account.

Parental incarceration is now considered by psychologists to be an “adverse childhood experience” (ACE) that is particularly traumatic due to its unique combination of trauma, shame, and stigma. ACEs are strongly related to the development and prevalence of a wide range of physical and mental health problems throughout a person's lifespan, and can create disrupted neurodevelopment and social, emotional and cognitive impairment.

If we are to ever break the cycle of intergenerational incarceration, we must tend to the needs of the children, strengthen family bonds that support successful re-entry, and be willing to accompany those who care for children in their parents' absence. The Center for Restorative Justice Works, and all of those who partner with and support us, connect these dots for children and families who are all too often invisible, voiceless and isolated.

In gratitude and service,

Amalia Molina, Executive Director

Sr. Suzanne Jabro, Founder & Board President

What the Heart Can See

Angela is 16 years old, vision-impaired, and has not seen her mother in 12 years. When asked how she was feeling, she replied, “I really don’t know what to expect, so I’ll take anything.”

Angela had decided not to see her mother by choice. “I’ve had enough on my plate and really couldn’t bear to see her here. But now, I’m older and have my life in order. I’m really, really curious about her.”

Once in the visiting room, she was enveloped in a big hug, and Angela and her mother spend the afternoon huddled together, talking non-stop, and feeding each other bits of their sandwiches, not unlike a bride and groom sharing their cake.

As the visit drew to a close, Angela hugged her mother and pressed her mother’s hand to her heart. She was beaming. And from the frank perspective of a child with a parent in prison she shared, “You know, I don’t believe in happy endings. They aren’t realistic and you always end up getting hurt. But sometimes, you get exactly what you need.”

As she exited the bus at the end of the very long day, she told her chaperone, “I am so much like my mom. Even if I can’t see her well, my heart can see.”

A big thank you to Sr. Teresa Lynch, for the wonderful photos that appear in this report. Quotes were provided by real people, sons, daughters, caregivers and inmates.

Kindness . . . an “Inside” Job

Each year, the inmates in Salinas Valley State Prison hold a fundraiser and designate the proceeds to a charity of their collective choice. This year, the recipient of this transformative act of kindness was Get On The Bus.

Regional Coordinator, Susan Sterrett, made a special visit to receive the check and thank the men for their generosity. “In my six years as Monterey Regional Coordinator, their check of $7,769 was the single largest and most heartfelt donation I have received. I was honored to accept their donation and share Get On The Bus’s gratitude for one evening inside the prison.”

When a large group of men convened for the evening was asked, “How many of you men have a child who has visited through Get on the Bus?” the room fell silent. Not a single inmate raised his hand. Finally, one man raised his hand and shared how he observed his cellmate before, during, and after his children visited with GOTB last year. He saw him change, transformed by his pride in being a father.

“I had to vote for Get on the Bus, after seeing what it did for him,” he told the group.

Susan expressed our gratitude, telling the men, “You chose to support the most important cause: love. Because of your kindness, the children who visit will know the joy of being hugged and kissed by their Dads. They will share a meal, throw a football and share a meal. They will know that they are loved by their Dad.

As we wrapped up one man said, “It’s for the kids, all about the kids.” We couldn’t have said it any better ourselves.

“You chose to support the most important cause: love.”

Presence

I spent a day on Death Row in San Quentin with Get On The Bus. It was an experience I will never forget, one filled with incredible joy and love, while at the same time horrible pain and sadness. Throughout the trip I chatted with everyone. I visited each cage in the East Wing and each table in the West wing. I watched an elderly couple, the mother fighting cancer and in a wheelchair, the stepfather kind and strong, visit their son condemned to death. I was full of smiles, jokes, laughter and high energy. I even walked up and down the aisle of the moving bus to talk to the children.

Then I got home, tired, and cried a long cry.

Summer Camp Experience Deepens Parent-Child Bond

CRJW's Camp Suzanne is a week-long program that takes a group of children to visit their mothers at the Federal Correctional Institution in Dublin, California, to reconnect, bond and heal through art therapy and typical summer camp activities.

In 2017, 16 children participated in Camp Suzanne. We prioritized families that will soon be reunified so that they could benefit from the counseling aspect of the program as they prepare for reunification.

A team of art therapists facilitates activities aimed at strengthening relationships and healing the hurt, damage, and confusion children feel surrounding their mother's incarceration.

One of this year's participants, David, is a 14 year-old boy who hadn't seen his mother in seven years. He is hoping to become the program's first Junior Camp Counselor next year, mentoring younger children who are going through this challenging shared experience.

Building Community with Women in Prison

The Cross Over group, under the leadership of Jan Urban, continues to provide services at the California Institution for Women (CIW) in Corona on a monthly basis, as it has done for the past 17 years. Activities include the monthly Women of Wisdom group, Cross Over events for the general prison population and an annual retreat.

An important legislative development has taken place that positively impacts our program. The passage of Proposition 57- Public Safety and Rehabilitation Act of 2016, means that our members will now have the opportunity to use their hours of attendance to reduce their sentence. For every 200 hours of documented programming attended within a year, inmates can earn up to four weeks of credits to reduce their sentence. It is our hope that this new law will increase monthly participation in our offerings to 50 members.

A big thank you to the planning committee that supports this program: Jan Urban, Jane Argento, Angie Galleano, Mary Jercinovich, Jennifer Trafford and Michelle Garcia.

Providing Training and Support

In keeping with its mission of uniting families, prisoners and communities impacted by incarceration, CRJW is welcoming women and men re-entering from prison back into productive society through job training opportunities at its offices.

Participants receive three months of paid hands-on experience working in a modern office setting, along with coaching and feedback in an environment that supports their successful reintegration. Upon completion, they receive a letter of recommendation and can list CRJW as a reference as they begin their job search.

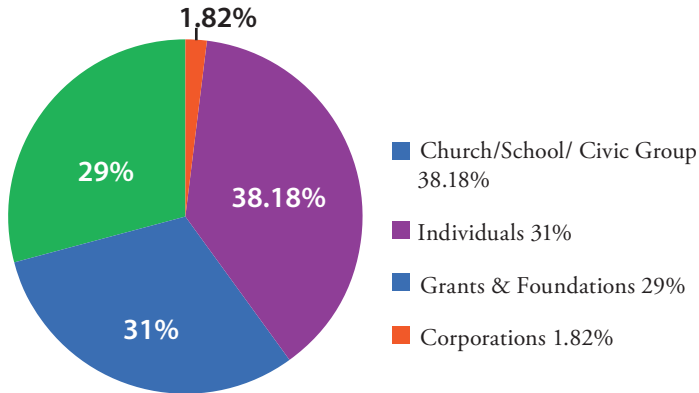

During the past year, Transitions4Success served six participants, four of whom transitioned into employment and two whom remain in the program.

Financial Stewardship

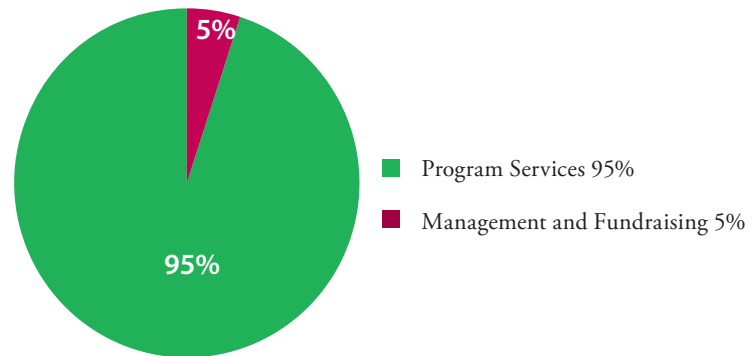

Each year, the Center for Restorative Justice Works raises funds through its generous grassroots network that reaches across California. Each donation adds a compassionate voice to our movement to unite children with their parents in prison. We are grateful for each person and organization that joins us in mission.

During the 2016-17 fiscal year, CRJW raised $801,824. The sources and use of funds are detailed below.
